Arts and Crafts Club Offering Rare Treats at Weekly Informals

Arts and Crafts Club is much gratified by the increasing interest shown in the program of lectures and entertainments it is presenting.

At Miss Fairley's lecture on February 16 one hundred and twenty-five attended.

Miss Fairley spoke with vividness, clarity and the absolute sureness of the trained scientific observer. She gave us, not the New Zealand of the casual tourist, but New Zealand as seen by a student, a woman of the big world, a master of her profession. As a landscape gardener she was particularly interested in the trees and flowers of that new land, and the pictures she showed, taken and colored by herself, had a singular charm. Johan Hagemeyer is quoted as saying that Miss Fairley's are the only photographs he has seen that were actual pictures, every landscape a composition.

Arts and Crafts expresses its appreciation of the mental stimulus such a lecture gives, and congratulates itself on being privileged to offer it to the community. Thanks are tendered to Rev. Fred Sheldon, who loaned and operated the lantern equipment.

At the regular monthly meeting on Monday, March 10, the club offers its members the pleasure of a song recital by William Edward Johnson, a native of Yorkshire, England, who is a distinguished teacher of singing in San Jose, and is about to open a studio in Oakland. Mr. Johnson has just returned from a visit to England, where he sang in nearly all the great cathedrals. His program and further particulars will be given later.

The Arts and Crafts continues its delightful tradition by giving its annual Dickens party on Friday, March 7th.

New Carmel Orchestra

An interesting feature of the week-end plays at the Arts and Crafts Theater is the first appearance of the recently organized local orchestra. For some time the musicians have been practicing together several evenings a week, and are now capable of rendering very acceptable music.

F. E. Coleman is the conductor. The players are as follows: Piano, Mrs. A. J. Comstock; violins, Mrs. Meckinstock, William Graske, Albert Comstock, Wesley Dickinson, Eugene Roehling; flute, T. W. Morgan, Jr.; saxaphone, Teaby Nichols; cornets, Robert Reigg and John Johnston; trombone, Charles Berkey; drums, Ralph W. Hicks.

Coming Local Events

Friday and Saturday evenings, Feb. 22 and 23—Two plays, "The Monkey's Paw" and "'Op-o'-Me-Thumb." Arts and Crafts Theatre.

Friday evening, March 7—Celebration of Dickens' birthday. Arts and Crafts Hall.

Thursday evening, March 20—Cherniavsky Trio. Monterey High School Auditorium.

Monday, March 10—Song recital by William Edward Johnson. Arts and Crafts Hall.

Friday and Saturday, March 28 and 29—Three-act comedy, "Belinda." Arts and Crafts Theatre.

Monday, April 14—City election.

Friday evening, April 25—Ossip Gabrilovich, pianist. Monterey High School Auditorium.

The Human Side and Humane Side

By Mrs. C. H. Yates

The Carmel branch of the Monterey County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is planning to accomplish many things this summer, both for the better comfort of the animals, whose welfare is its interest, and for the better comfort of the people of the community.

If what they plan to do can be carried out, Ocean avenue and the beach will be pleasanter places for pedestrians and visitors in general than it was last

To bring about this better state of affairs the Humane Society of Carmel want the co-operation of the people. The society has now a well appointed and modern animal home; they call it "The Shelter." This home, up on a hill side in Monterey, was acquired by the generosity of the local president, Miss [illegible] to the Monterey County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of which the Carmel society is a branch.

The Shelter is away from the closely built part of town and has ample room for animals. There are several stalls for horses or cows fitted up in the barn, two large paddocks are fenced for animals, and many small stalls wired for dogs or cats, provided with clean straw for bedding, and a competent attendant and his wife care for the animals. All this is under the super-management of a board of the Humane Society.

Recalling the troubles of last summer with the many stray dogs and cats that bothered people, dogs that ruined your fine, newly-planted garden, cats that upset your garbage barrel at nights, dogs that made life miserable for the motor drivers on Ocean avenue, and got into street fights, dogs that roamed the beach and made it sometimes troublesome for persons taking their one canine pet for a walk and, lastly but not least, the scourge of distemper that swept Carmel, and carried off so many valuable animals, and which epidemic was made more difficult to handle because of the number of apparently homeless dogs that wandered about full of the germs of distemper.

The Shelter hopes to provide for the stray animals picked off the streets that do not have owners; to get the stray cats which are left without mercy by persons leaving town and who neglect to provide for them; to care for such animals for a while pending any call from an owner or a buyer who will care for them; to abolish the trouble of these straying animals and care for them or mercifully have them sent to their happy hunting ground.

This caring for animals, especially the dog, and the laws regulating the punishment of those who ill treated animals, is no new law. As early as 1400 B. C. the Venidad, the sacred book of Persia, had a rigid set of laws, and in the Maha Bharata of India in the sixth century the laws were strictly enforced, this book telling of one hero who refused the offer of the God of the Sky, Indra, to take him direct to Paradise, if he could not take his dog with him.

All this the animal lover knows and we may safely leave them to extol each other. The Humane Society wants to relieve the animals of suffering; that is our calling; and we also want to relieve the town of trouble brought on by animals not properly cared for.

Will you help us?

Do you like dogs and cats? Yes! Then you will help us, because you do and know our work is good.

Do you like dogs and cats? No! Then you will help us, because you will know we will help rid you of them from your gardens, your garbage cans, and keep the beach clearer for children and keep your butcher shop door free of the poor hungry animals and grocers' baskets safe from inquiring noses.

Help us. We are coming round soon with a Membership Drive. Surely you will want to enroll as one or the other kind of member.

$1.00 a year means enrolment on the list of names of members; $1.00 a month puts you in as a subscribing member, or given in a lump sum, which rids you of the bother of paying each month.

We want from you the recognition of your help and co-operation. The local society is represented by Miss Louise Conger as president; Mrs. Bernice Warren and Mrs. John B. Jordan as vice-presidents; Miss McChesney as treasurer and Mrs. C. H. Yates as secretary.

Remember, we are coming to see you soon and want all of Carmel to be members of this society, and then Carmel will be a more comfortable place for the property owners and summer visitors and a happier place for the stray animal.

Death Halts Promising Career

During the spring and summer of 1922, covering a period of four or five months, a familiar figure in Carmel was a tall, handsome young man, sun-tanned, clear-eyed and alert, friendly and engaging. Truly a lovable personality.

We shall see him no more. Kamuela Searle is dead. He passed away at Point Loma, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, a week ago last Thursday, February 14. Details as to the cause of death are lacking, but it is [illegible] operation for cancer brought about by a wound suffered during the late war.

Kamuela Searle was twenty-eight years old. He was born in Hawaii of English parents. Early in life he showed a decided talent toward the forming and shaping of figures in mud, in clay, in dough. His parents, realizing this, saw that he had proper instruction. He was sent abroad and for several years studied and worked with the Russian sculptor, Prince Paul Troubetzkoy. Returning to this country, he immediately plunged into his life work.

He was particularly fond of animals. One of the first striking things he did was the figure of the hero dog Rufus, who saved a number of lives in Death Valley. Then followed the busts of prominent men, among them Lyman J. Gage, Luther Burbank, Grant Wallace and others. Recently he has been working the statue of a soldier. It is symbolic of the spiritual idea of man, his high ideals crushed by the death and destruction of war.

But Kamuela is dead. His strong and capable hands are stilled. His work here is done. He made the world happier for having been in it.

State Poet Laureate Honored at Dinner

A poet's dinner was given in Berkeley, Tuesday, February 12, in honor of Ina Donna Coolbrith, poet laureate of California, and Jessie Rittenhouse of Chicago, now in Carmel. Miss Rittenhouse was one of the founders of the Poetry Society of America and its secretary for years. Charles Keeler presided. Miss Coolbrith read from her poem, "The Dying Bedouin Chief." Miss Rittenhouse talked delightfully and recited original poems. George Sterling read his ballad, "The Gray Man."

Professor D. N. Lehmer, secretary of the poetry section, read letters of greeting from the poets laureate of Oklahoma and Colorado.

Mrs. Anna Kalfus Spero, chairman of the poetry section, announced affiliation with the Poetry Society of America, of which Mrs. Virgil Markham is secretary. She read portions of Clinton Scollard's "Lyrics of Lobos" from the Pine Cone, reprinted from the New York Herald.

Mr. Keeler closed the evening with Harriet Monroe's poem to Nancy Hanks, and being Lincoln's birthday, was quite appropriate.

Duncan Dancers Score Big Triumph at Monterey High

Two hundred Carmelites journeyed over the hill Tuesday evening, joining the artistic and social leaders of Monterey and the Grove in doing honor to the rare and delicate art of the famous Duncans, but outnumbering by more than two to one the representatives of the two more populous communities of the peninsula.

As an index to the future this record may be regarded as not insignificant. The [illegible] insula Philharmonic Society, which booked this season's excellent concert series, do not hesitate to express their amazement over the indifference of Monterey and Pacific Grove as a whole to the public-spirit and unselfish effort of the society occasionally to bring to these communities examples of what is going on artistically in the great world outside this particular corner thereof.

To write of Anna, Lisa and Margo and of the brilliant solos and seductive accompaniments of Rabinowitsch would be bringing coals to Newcastle so far as concerns those who attended Tuesday's performance in the auditorium of the Monterey high school, while the writer's natural impulse to share his enjoyment with those who were not present is almost outweighed by his impatience over musical conditions on the peninsula as indicated above.

The art of the three beautiful disciples of Isadora Duncan is possibly even less robust and more ethereal than that of their great teacher. The vizualization, in fleeting pictures, of music, of itself the most volitile and evanescent of the arts, becomes in these dances a pure art-form, a thing of satisfying beauty in and of itself, though the original glory of the music is retained in full.

Nothing that can be said here could add to the pleasure experienced by Tuesday's audience, nor could it even faintly supply to those not attending some idea of the dignity and beauty

In Favor of New Zoning Ordinance

February 21, 1924.

Editor, The Pine Cone,
Carmel, California.

Dear Sir:

Writing letters to the Pine Cone seems to be as much a part of everyday life in Carmel as are the milkshrines or the fireplace-coils. As a newcomer expecting to make my home here, I strongly favor the zoning ordinance. It gives me assurance that this place, so beautiful and so unique, will keep its individualilty even while it grows.

The reason why people are coming here in increasing numbers is plainly because Carmel is different from other coast cities. Other cities have had beautiful beaches, but Carmel's beach has been kept inviolate, free from hotels and concessions. This is a wonderful advantage. Another is the standard of simple living and independence which has been maintained here. Carmel is a successful experiment in modern living, and the impression I get is that its atmosphere has been created by the community as a whole, by its business men and women, and by its hotel owners, as well as by its artists and writers and its people of so-called leisure. Nearly all of you must like Carmel as it is, or you would not have helped to make it the place it is.

I believe that the zoning ordinance tends to preserve Carmel's assets, and at the same time to provide for right growth.

Yours very truly,
CELIA HARRIS.

Double Bill Scores Big at the Arts and Crafts

Rose Jordan . . . Helena Couger
Celeste . . . . . Lexie Grant
Amanda Afflick . . Ruth Kuster
Horace Greensmith . . Tom Bickle

A full review of the plays will be published [illegible]

City Zoning Catechism

Questions asked by citizens regarding the zoning ordinance are here answered by the City Planning Commission and the Ci[illegible]

Question—If I have a single lot, 25x100, in the residence zone, can I, if the zoning ordinance stands, erect a garage on that lot, and if I erect a garage can I erect a double garage and put a three-room apartment above it?

Answer—You can erect a garage, single or double, but you can not add living quarters to the same. In regard to 25 foot lots, we are informed by the City Clerk that with the exception of lot 22, block 37, in Carmel City, over the gravel-pit, all such lots are owned in groups of two or more. Therefore, no property owners are deprived of the right to build on such groups by the terms of the ordinance.

Question—If I am in the residential zone and have taken boarders in the past but wish to enlarge my house so that I may take more boarders or lodgers, will this be permitted if the zoning ordinance stands?

Answer—There is nothing in the zoning ordinance to prevent a permit to enlarge your residence. There is nothing in the zoning ordinance to prevent any resident in any part of the city from taking boarders or lodgers.

Question—Is it allowable, if the zoning ordinance stands, to put up in the residence zone a double garage with an apartment above?

Answer—Yes, provided there is no other dwelling house on the lot.

Question—Can I build a residence in the hotel zone?

Answer—Certainly you can.

Question—Can I put up a residence, hotel or apartment house in the business zone.

Answer—Certainly you can.

Question—What is the main object of the zoning ordinance?

Answer—To preserve the beauty and unique character of Carmel, and to ensure continuity of growth as a residential instead of a commercial city.

Question—Does the Planning Commission consider this a perfect ordinance?

Answer—No. It should be understood that improvement in the ordinance if necessary can be effected by amendment at any time. This is true of any law, municipal or otherwise. But we believe the zoning ordinance to be an excellent thing for the city. We think that the fact that it may be improved is not an argument for defeating it.

ALFRED E. BURTON, Pres.
SUSAN PORTER, Secretary.

I am of the opinion that the foregoing replies are a proper interpretation of the zoning ordinance.
ARGYLL CAMPBELL, City Attorney.

Election Information

The next regular meeting of the city board of trustees takes place on Tuesday, March 4. It is probable that at that time election officers will be appointed and a polling place selected for the city election, though the last day for doing so is March 15.

Noon of Tuesday, March 25, is the last day upon which candidates may file with the city clerk affidavits of acceptance of nomination. Blanks may be obtained at the city hall. List of nominees will be published twice before election day.

THE SWING OF THE PENDULUM

The political astrologers and soothsayers are early at their work. Preliminary surveys, charts and sketches of the political heavens are already on view. All the present forecasts are in agreement on certain points. If Coolidge is nominated, Underwood will not be considered by the Democrats. If Johnson is nominated, McAdoo fades out of the picture. In hese determinations and dispositions the seers recognize that the underlying political cleavage is between conservatives and progressives. The United States is the last great stronghold of conservatism in the world. But the political pendulum swings with a curiously even regularity. A Roosevelt is succeeded by a Taft, a Taft by a Wilson, a Wilson by a Harding. If the process is not interrupted, it is the turn this year of the progressive type. But it was never more difficult than in the present condition to say who will be the candidates. It is not so simple as the hazel-rod sounders of the future would have us believe.—Collier's Weekly.

STOP NEGLECT OF ELECTIVE FRANCHISE

Now that the flurry over the award of the Bok peace plan prizes has died down, public interest should turn to another matter of vital importance to the welfare of the United States. A national election is before us and questions of grave import, questions involving the prosperity of the country for a term of years, questions involving our relations to other nations, questions involving, perhaps the very perpetuity of our Government are to be determined by the results of that election. When the issues are so grave, it behooves every American to take his part in determining the policy of the National Government. And yet there will be hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of voters who are likely to stay away from the polls.

After having neglected their privilege of voting, nay, more, their duty to vote, these same individuals will be loudest in complaining if governmental matters do not go to suit them. Failing to exercise their own prerogatives, they will complain because, through that neglect, perhaps, the wrong administration is ushered into power.

There ought to be some way of forcing voters to exercise their elective franchise, but no method of so doing has as yet been put in force. One plan proposed is that American citizens failing to register and vote shall constitute the first list for jury service.

Carmel Will be the Hub

That California will soon be one of the great art centers of the country was the prophecy made recently by M. E. Cummings, professor of modeling at the University of California.

"Americans have money and they will spend it. Nowhere in America are there such artistic homes and parks as in California. Consequently there is abundant opportunity here for the men who design villas, statues, or fountains. We have a climate like that of Italy and southern Europe. Why shouldn't this state become famous for its art?" says Professor Cummings.

courses at the University. There is not room enough for all those who wish to study modeling. We are planning to build a larger studio and start classes in life study and bronze and marble work. Our students have a real appreciation of art."

From Teaching to Writing

Carleton Beals, author of "Rome or Death!" says that his first direct contact with things Italian came through teaching English and civics to a group of East Side Italians. His book, however, was produced after long residence in Italy.

Born in Kansas, his parents moved to Pasadena, so that his boyhood was spent in California. His Alma Mater is the University of California, which gave him an A. B. degree with honors in 1916. While an undergraduate he received the Bryce historical prize and was twice winner of the Bonnheim essay prize. He next went east, to Columbia on a scholarship, and took an A. M. degree.

During the war Mr. Beals joined the Coast Artillery, being discharged on account of heart trouble in February, 1918. His lines fell for the next few years in Mexico, where he was instructor to the staff of Carranza for three months.

In August, 1920, he went to Spain, traveling steerage. There he lived among the people and largely earned his living as a Spaniard might do. He has since written important articles on Spain for American publications. Since 1921 he has been in Italy, residing in Genoa, Milan, Bologna, Florence and Rome.

Mr. Beals has published articles on Mexico, Spain and Italy, and other subjects, in a number of leading periodicals.

War Cartoonist Making Good

Captain Bruce Bairnsfeather, whose war cartoons have made him famous, is now traveling in California. It is claimed that he did as much as any person or institution toward keeping up the morale of the soldiers by his "comics" and his wit throughout the darkest days of the war.

war made him, following a discouraging start as a cartoonist. In a recent interview he said:

"After years of drawing pictures for advertisements, poster display and what not, and trying to break into the newspapers, I was just getting fairly started on what promised to be a fairly lucra-

"It took all the wind out of my sails, so to speak. I could see my hopes and ambitions all go glimmering.

"There was nothing for me to do, at any rate, but enlist, and soon I was in the English service.

"In camp I used to draw pictures and caricatures for the amusement of the soldiers. In France one night in billett 'Old Bill' was created on the broad surface of a blank wall. The men urged me to send a copy of the drawing to the London 'Bystander.' I did so. Soon afterwards I was shelled during a nasty engagement at Ypres and was in the hospital for some time.

"When I recovered I found that my sketch had been printed, and that it had at once created a demand for more from a number of editors. That was the beginning. Then came a lot of war work, followed by concert hall and vaudeville engagements and lecture tours—and I'm still at it."

THE WOMAN OF TAMALPAIS

There is her noble head faced up.
There is the round of her bosom
Where her hands are crossed,
  Her bosom-guests.
She is the woman of Tamalpais
On her couch close to the sky.
Earth was tossed and Tamalpais came up,
  And there she rests.

At her feet stand the Old Ones,
Trees in the wood of Muir,
Each straightened to shoulder-off
  An Old One in the row
To maintain its seclusion
And to watch, over rows beneath,
The Older One, when it shall take Tamalpais below.

The Older One crawling about
The mountain hid in color,
Sometimes in color of the sod,
  Sometimes green as smilax.
Draperies of her couch last month
Were wild blue lilacs. The sea,
Which is the Older One, hid out
  In colors of lilacs.

Suns come down to die beside her.
And she knows not. She slept
Yesterday, heavily as we sleep
After sudden sorrow
Of tumblors that have been (and shall be)
Sinking the individualities
Of Earth, and heavily
She will sleep tomorrow.

—Anna Kalfus Spero.

Editor Pine Cone:
Dear Sirs:

I enclose $2 for one year's subscription to your publication.

I admire the work you are doing and realize what a small community you are operating in.

The Carmel Pine Cone is a credit to you, to Carmel, and to the tree from which it fell.

Duncan Dancers Score Big Triumph

of the Duncan art, which is dancing raised to the nth degree.

These dancers neither attempt to tell a pantomimic story in their dancing, nor to delineate tangible and commou emotions. Only the essence of emotion, the impersonal abstractiou thereof; what Plato described as the idea lying back of reality, is shadowed forth by their interpretatiou. It is safe to say that the art of none, save that of Isadora Duncau herself, has had in such abundance this extraordinary spirituelle quality. But it matters not whether we agree or disagree with the theory of the "interpretation" of one art by another; the fact remains that the Duncans have given us, if only from the standpoint of the beauty of exquisite mural paintings, something unforgettable.

the same auditorium on March 20, comprise the second group of artists presented by the Philharmonic Society. The fame of these three brothers is world-wide, and the local musical organization is to be commended on its discernment in securing them for its series.

Was He Beardless?

Two portraits of Shakespeare are sufficiently diverse to add piquancy to the problem, "What did Shakespeare really look like?" The painting called the Felton portrait, first discovered in a broker's shop in the Minories in 1788, by "a gentleman of fashion," shows him beardless except for a slight tuft of hair under the lower lip and a small, fair mustache. The Lumley portrait, which was originally in possession of Lord Lumley, a contemporary of the poet, is more in keeping with the generally accepted fancy of Shakespeare's appearance. He is shown with a florid complexion, a close-cropped beard and small, brown mustache.

The February meeting of the Carmel Missionary Society will be held next Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. T. A. Pudan, Carmelo and Eleventh streets. An interesting program on the child and its future, the home and its influence, the importance of good training and environment, and kindred subjects, will be given. A good attendance is desired.

Frederick Preston Search, while driving his tempermental Lizzy in Carmel Valley a few days ago, had the steering gear break on him, and the old girl plowed her way through a fence. First aid to the machine was rendered by Dr. R. Allen Peckham. Mr. Search required none.

Mr. and Mrs. Aucil King of Alameda are spending the week end in their cottage on Junipero street.

Miss Irene Alexander of San Jose is the week-end guest of Daisy Bostick.

FAITH IN MEN IS FAITH IN YOURSELF

When George Washington, whose birthday we celebrate, next Friday, gave up the luxuries of home to fight for the independence that seemed nigh impossible, he had implicit faith in the men whom he later lead to success in a worthy cause.

But Washington's faith in his men was rewarded in the faith they had in him. So with today. We believe implicitly in the Monterey peninsula and its men and women. In return we seek the confidences of the people whom we serve and are constantly adding to our banking accommodations and service to that end.

Let us have confidence in each other—confidence in the future of our community and confidence in the honesty of purpose of our fellow man.

The Popularity of Investments in Public Utility Securities

THE PEOPLE and the public utility companies of the United States are rapidly becoming unified in ownership and mutual interest. More than 2,600,000 citizens now have money directly invested in these great modern institutions.

Of the total senior security issues of American corporations in 1920, upwards of 17 per cent were those of utility corporations. In 1923, however, the proportion of utility securities purchased by investors increased to 34 per cent of the total.

Financial authorities agree that the stability, or in other words, the safety of this class of investments has been remarkable. It is no wonder that they are exceedingly popular investments.

The Byllesby utility companies are owned by upwards of 62,000 shareholders, of whom upwards of 80 per cent are residents of the 750 communities supplied with service.

An investment in the preferred shares of the Company is safe, dependable and pays an excellent return
